Join us for the 5th Annual Emerge Media Awards!

March 9, 2019 - The Emerge Media Awards organizers are pleased to announce that the fifth annual EMA gala will take place on April 4, 2019. This night of fun and celebration will take place at St. James Cathedral Centre in Toronto and will celebrate the talent of undergraduate media students from all across Canada.

The Emerge Media Awards showcase the achievements of students in different media disciplines such as photography, audio storytelling, public relations, the written word, multimedia production, design for a print magazine and online magazine, and videography. Hundreds of submissions were received from Canadian universities and colleges competing for a chance to win in one of our eight categories.

“The purpose of the EMA’s is to celebrate the exceptional work crafted by media students from coast to coast,” says James MacDonald, the University of Guelph-Humber professor overseeing the awards gala.

This year the Emerge Media Awards will be hosted by two fourth-year media studies students Paol Wierzbicki and Ryan Sukandan. This is the first year that the awards night event will have two hosts.

“I’m very excited to be a co-host for the EMA’s because this is an event we hear all about during our 4 years at Guelph-Humber,” says Sukandan. “Being able to be a part of the event and contribute to its overall success is very special and something that will make the end of university a lasting memory for myself and my peers.”

The gala is organized by a team of 15 University of Guelph-Humber graduating students from media business and public relations specialization streams.! Make sure to follow our social media accounts @Emerge.TO for updates on all things related to Emerge.
