And the Emerge Media Awards goes to...
2019 finalists announced for national student awards competition

Toronto, March 12, 2019 – The Emerge Media Awards is proud to announce the finalists for the 2019 event. The winners in eight media categories will be presented at a gala event on April 4, 2019 at St. James Cathedral Centre in downtown Toronto.

Going into its fifth year, the Emerge Media Awards Gala is organized and hosted by the University of Guelph-Humber's fourth year graduating students majoring in Public Relations and Media Business. The event is designed to recognize and acknowledge the work of post-secondary students in eight categories: including public relations, communications and audio visual.

The submissions received are from colleges and universities across Canada. This year's finalists will be representing the following schools: University of Guelph – Humber, University of British Columbia, University of Regina, MacEwan University, Ryerson University, University of Toronto, University of King's College, Mohawk College, Langara College, Fanshawe College, Conestoga College, Humber College and Sheridan College.

"These individuals and teams displayed excellence in their craft and we are delighted to recognize their work," says James Macdonald, a Guelph-Humber professor who is overseeing the event.

The finalists and their work can be found on the Emerge Media Awards website.

For students responsible for planning the event, putting it all together has truly been a rewarding experience. "The announcement of finalists was a memorable moment that I am very happy to be apart of,” says Natalie Dixon, Emerge Media Awards team lead. “This night will be one to remember for all those who attend.. We are eager to welcome all distinguished guests and finalists.”
